The following apostrophe, which appeared first in the Polynesian some three years since, is supposed to have been composed by the late King Kamehameha IV., or at least has been credited to him. Just at this time it possesses peculiar interest, and will be read with deep emotion. It breathes that kindly spirit that characterized him and for which those who knew him best, admired him most. The language used in the entire composition, shows a true poetic mind, but the proper contained in the last paragraph in particular, is impressive and touching.]

Apostrophe to Kamehameha I. FROM ONE OF HIS RACE.

A

Shade of my honor d ancestors, surnamed the Great First of a name illustrious made by thee ;-By thee and the Fates omnipotent,-'twas thine To see the thresholds of two ages open, And lone and glorious, like the Morning Star, To reign in the portals of the dawn; -to see The ancient might of all thy dynasties Depart with all its mysteries, and its gloom, And all its grandeur-taking to the Shades Many a brave and noble soul untutor'd, Worthy of brotherhood and rule with thee; And bearing with thee, worthy the bequest, All their strong manly instincts, now to meet And merge with the gentler traits of heaven in thee.

So with one hand waving away the shadows Of all thy father's faiths, and their traditions, Their savage impulses and cruel passions, But holding still their earnestness of purpose, Their iron will, capacity for action, And stubbornness to reign, thou didst reach forth And usher in and place before thy people Their future Hope. So when the raging sea Is lash'd by harricanes and torn by rocks, Where the vast roll of the Pacific roars Against these storm-beat northern bluffs and headlands, Subsides to leeward into gentle ripples That softly break upon the coral beach With sleepy murmur, bathing children's feet ;-So didst thou then abandon the rude shocks, Turmoil and chaos of heathenism, and come To dwell with the calmer world, whose far advance Would teach thy people peace.

Fourth of thy Name, succeeding by the grace . Of God to this inheritance, I strive, Have striven and will, here to maintain the charges Bequeathed by thee in no light mood,-to hold. With all the strength I may, thy native force Of thought and purpose .- Yet I grieve ! I grieve ! To see our ancient stalwart race decline. And shrink and wither in despite of all The better teachings and the better will. The vigor Of the old time is gone! Enervate both In brain and body, they are not the people Who fought with thee and cheered thee on to battle, Who drew green plenty from their bounteous land, Ran o'er the mountains swift as summer shadows, And in the deep, 'gainst fishes, won the race. They sicken and they die. I grieve! I grieve!

Over the wasting land once green with crops, Now mark'd by silence and the grass grown ridges ;-The merry fields of old where dance and song And healthful games cheer'd on the daily toil Till toil was pastime. They are silent now, Or only from some solitary hut Comes a low wail or feeble strain of song, Or meaningless and melancholy hymn. The spirit of our fathers is not here; The goodly forms erect and velvet skinn'd, Valiant in war, playful in peace and love, The pride and beauty of their island home, Are missing, and the nation droops.

Yet still the silver fringe and broad blue sea Encircle us; the same loud rolling surf, O'er which my fathers frolick'ed, beats the same Incessant grand pulsations, and the mountains Loom high in heaven as ever, -only she, The implacable Pele, feels the touch of age, And vomits forth her wrath in feebler spasms.

Oh King! 'tis known that thou didst love thy people. Then, if it may be, visit them once more ! (In form allow'd by Heaven.) Breathe one draught Of thy old vigor forth over the land. And pray for it in thy abiding place, Wherever that may be; and pray for me, That I may govern worthy of my race, Rouse up my people from their baneful trance, And in the appointed time join unabash'd My crowned ancestors. Hawait, 29th January, 1861.

VARIETY.

The heart is perpetually in vigorous motion, and the brain should be as busy as the heart.

The word cotton has been adopted in modern European languages from the Arabic word, meaning the same article, and which, when put into English letters, would be pronounced "kotun." In Egypt it is called "gotun."

English Court circles are much agitated, says a London correspondent of the Philadelphia Enquirer, by the publication of a command by the Queen, prohibiting the use of tobacco within the precints of Windsor Castle. So determined is she in her purpose that, not content with issuing the order in general terms, she has had it printed, framed and glazed, and hung up in every room in the Castle-not only in the apartments appropriated to ordinary guests, but in those occupied by the officers, Lords and Ministers in waiting, and even in those now being fitted up in one of the separate towers for the especial and exclusive use of the Prince of Wales. It is generally understood that it is particularly against him that the movement is directed, and that it covers other and more serious offences. The recent birthday of the Prince, hitherto kept as a day of great festivity at the Court, passed over without the slightest recognition at Windsor Castle. What the real trouble is no one seems to know.

THE "ESTABLISHED CHURCH" OF ENGLAND .- The "Established Church" of England is a huge concern. Its wealth is immense, its patronage is almost illimitable. Wielded by an unscrupulous Ministry, it is a political engine of tremendous powers. More than one Premier has been saved by its powerful arm; more than one general election has been carried by its instrumentality. A correspondent of the London Times makes the following statement of the amount to be divided in stipends, to ecclesiastics of different

To a man entering the church at the present time he sees himself in competition with £15,000 men for Two archbishoprics, £15,000 and £10,000 a year, and the best positions in rank.

Twenty-five bishopries, £10,000 to £4,200 s year. A hundred canonries, £1,000 to £500 a year. One hundred and fifty livings over £1,000 a year. Fifteen hundred livings between £1,000 and £500

Nearly all the rest livings of $300 a year, and a good house when he is FIT to receive one Compare this with the Law, the Army, or Physic. And yet all these "livings" are in the hands of a few members of the aristocracy. The house of Russel alone controls, it is said, some hundreds. In many instances-two or three of which are held by the same person—they are advertised for sale.
